

Student Name:

Topic:

Date:

Jump into as many conversations as you can, especially outside of class. Once you've answered a question, try to add something more (another fact, thought, or even another question).

Jump into as many conversations as you can, especially outside of class. Once you've answered a question, try to add something more (another fact, thought, or even another question).

Practice telling more complete stories about things that are happening, happened or will happen. Practice adding detail every time you can. Report and discuss events beyond your immediate environment. Imagine trying to deal with a problem and propose a variety of solutions.

Practice telling more complete stories about things that are happening, happened or will happen. Practice adding detail every time you can. Report and discuss events beyond your immediate environment. Imagine trying to deal with a problem and propose a variety of solutions.

Intermediate Low

Intermediate Mid

Intermediate High

Advanced Low

Novice High

Much of the time you can also use your language to express your own thoughts and get the things that you need. You tend to speak in phrases and some sentences. You can often ask and answer simple questions.

You can do all of this in a way that your teacher and others who are used to language learners can understand what you are saying most of the time.

You can also use your language to express your own thoughts and get the things that you need. You tend to speak in single sentences. You can ask and answer simple questions.

You can do all of this in a way that your teacher and others who are used to language learners can understand what you are saying.

You also use your language to express your own thoughts and get the things that you need. You can use more than one sentence at a time. You ask and answer questions.

You do all of this in a way that your teacher and others who are used to language learners understand what you are saying.

You keep the conversation going by asking questions, telling stories, describing people, places, and things, and reporting events. You can talk about some topics beyond yourself. You can also resolve a problem that you might encounter in your daily life. You speak in well-connected sentences and some paragraphs.

You do all of this in a way that people who speak this language can understand you most of the time even if they are not used to language learners.

You keep the conversation going by asking questions, telling stories, describing people, places, and things, and reporting events. You can talk about some topics beyond yourself. You can also resolve a problem that you might encounter in your daily life. You speak in well-connected sentences and some paragraphs.

You do all of this in a way that people who speak this language can understand you most of the time even if they are not used to language learners.

Spoken Evidence Feedback Form