Keep writing more about more topics. Add more information; use a variety of vocabulary. Form sentences or questions in different ways. Frequently review your writing for accuracy and correctness.

Novice High

Much of the time you write well enough to express your own thoughts and accomplish what you need. You write in phrases and some sentences.

You can do all of this in a way that most of the time your teacher and others who are used to the writing of language learners can understand your writing.

Keep writing more about more topics. Look for more outlets or opportunities to write to different people. As you review your writing, see if there are sentences or details that you can link together.

Intermediate Low

You write well enough to ask simple questions and accomplish what you need. You write in single sentences.

You can do this in a way that your teacher and others who are used to the writing of language learners can understand your writing.

Practice adding words to be more specific in describing things. Think about the sequence in an event, story, or process and practice writing about it. Use words like "then," "so," "afterwards," and "finally." Ask more specific questions to get more detailed information

Intermediate Mid

You write about yourself and your life. You write well enough to accomplish what you need and pose a variety of questions. You can write some longer sentences and connect some sentences together.

You do all of this in a way that your teacher and others who are used to the writing of language learners readily understand your writing.

Practice writing more complete stories about things that are happening, happened or will happen. Describe things in a way that the person you're writing to can form a mental picture. Practice adding examples and details as often as you can. Report on events beyond your immediate environment.

Intermediate High

You keep the conversation going by asking questions, telling stories, describing you write about yourself and a number of topics beyond yourself. Most of the time you can write well enough to tell stories, describe people, places, and things, and report events.

You write in well-connected sentences and some paragraphs. People who are not used to language learners understand your writing most of the time.

Advanced Low

You demonstrate the ability to narrate and describe in major time frames with some control. You can compose simple summaries on familiar topics. Advanced Low writers can combine and link sentences into texts of paragraph length .

Your writing is understood by natives not accustomed to the writing of non-natives, although some additional effort may be required in the reading of the text.
